Dear Dr. Henney,

I am asking you to join The World Health Organization in recommending a ban on the use of medically important antibiotics to promote animal growth.

Because I had a liver transplant six years ago, I can only take certain antibiotics because the immunisupressant drugs prevent me from taking some antibiotics. When I had pneumonia this winter, I had to take three different antibiotics to get me well because the first two did not work. If we continue to use antibiotics on animals, it is possible people could die because there will not be any antibiotic that will cure them.

Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,
